

REVIVAL TO BEGIN AT BAPTIST CHURCH SUNDAY MORNING

Special Revival Effort To Be Held at Local Church—Famous Evangelist to Do the Preaching—Song Leader Coming

Special revival services for which the pastor and the membership of the First Baptist church have been planning for the past several weeks will begin at that church Sunday morning. The services all day Sunday will be in charge of the pastor, Rev. John A. Davis as the evangelist is not expected to arrive until Monday, being unable to leave his own pastorate until Sunday evening following the evening services.

The local Baptists consider themselves quite fortunate in being enabled to procure the services of Dr. John F. Vines, pastor of the First Baptist church of Roanoke, Va., to do the preaching during the revival. Dr. Vines was the evangelist at a revival held in the local church in 1921 and was heard by hundreds of Maysville people who pronounced him one of the best pupil orators heard here in many a day. He is regarded as one of the best little teachers in the bounds of the Southern Baptist Convention and is a most pleasing speaker. As leader of song the committee is fortunate in having procured Rev. J. P. Carter, of Hendersonville, N. C., a singing evangelist attached to the Home Mission Board. The Rev. Mr. Carter is expected to reach Maysville Saturday and will be in charge of the music Sunday and all through the revival. Music will be a feature of the revival.

Services will be held until further notice each day at 2:30 and 7:30 p. m. and the entire public is invited to all services.

FORMAL AWARD OF PRIZE IS MADE TO MAYSVILLE POET

Mrs. Eleanor Duncan Wood Honored at Mass Meeting Held at Court House Friday evening—Neighbors and Citizens Attend.

Scores of neighbors and fellow citizens gathered at the Mason county court house Friday evening to help honor to a Maysvillian who has on more than one occasion brought honor to Maysville and Mason county. The occasion was one of the most delightful and elevating ever experienced in Maysville.

Mrs. Eleanor Duncan Wood, whose poetry has been classed among the best from Southern poets for several years, was formally presented with fifty dollars in gold, the prize offered by the Kentucky Memorial Association for the best poem commemorating the sacrifice of Kentucky's brave during the world conflict. Mrs. Wood's poem "In Memoriam" was selected by the committee on awards from a list of sixty-three, the writers of which were not known to the committee until after the best was selected.

Several addresses were made by representatives of various state and local patriotic organizations and Prof. L. L. Dantzler, instructor of English at Kentucky University, chairman of the committee on awards, presented the prize in a splendid address. To Mrs. Wood Prof. Dantzler said:

"Mrs. Wood, it is unalloyed pleasure to every member of the committee and to the members of the Memorial Committee to see you receive this prize. You have written a poem worthy of it. The committee had little difficulty in resting their decision upon it. After choice had fallen upon it and before the judges knew the name of the author, they sat and silently listened as one read the lines again. The poem commemorates Kentucky's dead; its conception is original; it is elevated throughout in tone and appeals to our noblest feelings; it gives comfort and hope to the distressed. A Kentucky poet writing years ago of those heroes who lie in the Frankfort cemetery said, 'The hero of unanguished fields rests on his laurels well. In future years his country's page his gallant deed shall tell.' You poem will be on that page that writes the history of the heroes commemorated. In receiving this prize may you have no misgivings that the prize may be thought undeserved. The committee of awards have none, neither do the members of the Memorial Committee, nor do any of your hosts of friends. Permit me to present to you this prize and may your poetry long continue to give inspiration and delight."

Mrs. Wood responded in her usual pleasing manner.

The Kentucky Cardinal Band added much to the pleasure of the evening by delightful renditions of patriotic airs.

D. Giardiana Brought From Prison to Testify in Jack Biggs Case; Says $25,000 Was To Be Paid If Murder Attempt Failed.

Louis, Ky., Sept. 30.—The case of the Commonwealth vs. Jack Biggs, charged with conspiracy to hire another to do murder, probably will be given to the jury today, following the completion of testimony for the defense.

The first witness called for the state was Charles Duvall, who entered the court room on crutches. He was severely injured last week by a falling telephone pole. Duvall described in detail the ambush and his trip to repair the telephone wire. He is a line-man employed by the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

The Commonwealth called their witnesses who testified that Cam Biggs told them that Jack and Bob Biggs were worrying him wanting him to kill Duvall.

Jack Biggs, on the stand, made a blanket denial of all the testimony given by D. Giardiana. Biggs denied having talked with the man or having offered him money.

Fifty thousand dollars was the price he was to receive for killing Charles Duvall, Dominique Giardiana, 27, Gary, Ind., claimed on the witness stand.

He is the state's chief witness in the trial of Jack Biggs, of Carter county, charged, together with his brother and sister and nephew with conspiring to kill Charles F. Duvall, of Olive Hill.

He told of the alleged conspiracy conceived in Gary, Ind., and given birth in Carter county June 23, 1922, when he and an Italian companion fired several shots at Duvall.

Giardiana was arrested near Grayson the morning following the shooting. He was convicted of ambushing and sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary. His companion escaped and has never been captured.

Following his conviction Giardiana went before the Carter county grand jury and told the story which resulted in the indictment of the four Biggs. He was brought here from the state penitentiary at Frankfort to testify in behalf of the Commonwealth.

CIRCUIT COURT TO RECONVENE MONDAY.

After a recess of several weeks, the Mason Circuit Court will be reconvened by Judge C. D. Newell at the court house here Monday morning. It is understood that there is very little for the court's attention and an early adjournment for the present term is predicted. The grand jury which has been on vacation for several weeks will return to its duties on Wednesday and it is understood there is very little for this body's attention.

THE VETO

It was an ungracious task the President was confronted with by the passage of the Bonus bill, but the condition of the country left him little choice. It is misleading to speak of the bonus as something owed to the veterans of the world war, because the obligations of the contract had been, or are being, met. In the wider sense of what the country owes to the men who served it in the war the debt can never be discharged.

A country at war needs so many soldiers that it is impossible to compensate them on the basis of civilian earnings. It can do little more than provide for their necessities in the service and subsequently so far as their ability to earn their living is impaired. This is not discharging the nation's debt to the soldiers, but it is as much of it as any country can discharge.

Upon our entering the war the pay of soldiers was doubled and a vast scheme of war risk insurance was established, involving some payment by the men, but a large part of the payment was by the country. This project was undertaken with the expectation that it would take the place of the pension system, which has been subject to a great deal of abuse since the civil war. But the President entertains no doubt, and we presume no one does, that as the survivors of the world war become old pensions will be voted to them, regardless of the payments on account of war risk insurance. For many years after the civil war the men who fought in it were pensioned only for disabilities incurred in the service. Later this was extended to disabilities not incurred in service or during the period of enlistment, and finally Mr. Roosevelt's dictum that old age is a disability was applied to all veterans over 65.

The President notes that in the current fiscal year we are paying more than half a billion dollars on hospitalization and care of sick and wounded, on compensation and vocational training for the disabled, and for insurance. Next year these items will fall little short of a half a billion. About 100,000 veterans are having vocational training; nearly 20,000 have completed this training, and many of these are earning more than they did before they entered the service. There has been paid to disabled men and their dependent relatives $480,000,000, and 175,000 disabled veterans are now receiving compensation along with medical or hospital care where needed. Those who have received nothing are the young, healthy men who came out of the war uninjured and who have hardly yet reached their maximum earning capacity.

Besides the loans made to our Allies and the considerable part of our war expenses defrayed from taxation, the country incurred a debt of 15 billions and it will take a long time to discharge this. We are still paying interest and pensions on account of the civil war. The country could not pay the bonus without levying additional taxation, and the business of the nation now is suffering from heavy taxes. Congress was indisposed to levy a sales tax, which seemed to the President the only way of meeting the charge. A bond issue of three billions or more would have had a very serious effect upon the business of the country. That the nation is in no position to pay the bonus was admitted by the supporters of a bill which would have paid the greater part of the bonus in three-year notes, which the recipients would have discounted, but at the expiration of the three years the country would have to levy a new tax to redeem the notes—an arrangement which was open to very serious objection.

But the injured veterans have received substantial evidences of the country's gratitude beyond anything previous in this or any other country, and as all the survivors incur the further disability of old age they will undoubtedly be pensioned, and the scale of pensions has been rising steadily for 50 years. The generous care of the disabled and the old is really about all the country can do.—Philadelphia Record.

A PRESIDENT OF COURAGE AND CONVICTIONS.

In his action yesterday with regard to the bonus legislation President Harding revealed himself to the American people as a man of courage and as a Chief Executive who puts sacred duty ahead of personal, political consideration.

In returning the bonus measure to Congress without his approval and in opposition to the tremendous pressure of his own party, President Harding had consideration for the common sense of the situation, with the Government staggering as it is under its enormous burden of debt.

The President's objections to the measure as set forth in his message are so sound, and so clear, and so convincing that they will have the endorsement of all thinking America. There is no escape for the unbiased and unprejudiced mind from complete concurrence in the logic, the truth and the force of the President's unanswerable argument.

For courage, for deep sense of duty, for splendid guardianship of the sacred trust he assumed as President of the United States, there has been nothing finer in any act of any Chief Executive since the founding of the Government.

Whatever the cost to Mr. Harding's political future doesn't matter, since it is a bigger thing and a better thing for the President of the United States to be right, to be honest with the job he holds, to be honest with the people who gave him his great trust than to be returned for a second term to that great trust.

But the truth is that the man who disregards selfish considerations for conscientious public service strengthens himself with the people. It is the coward who cringes to political clamor, not the strong man, and Mr. Harding now stands out before the American people, and the world, as a man who has the strength and the force of character to make good in a supreme test between selfishness and duty.—New York Herald.

Germany is reported as rapidly regaining her merchant marine strength. The past year has been very prosperous for the German ships. Here is another competitor for world trade that the United States must meet if the American flag is to stay on the seas. One more good reason why the ship subsidy bill should be promptly enacted into law.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE FORERUNNER OF CHRIST.

Luke 1:1-33

An angel promises a little son.

A Long Night. — The hours are unending seemingly to the watch as he waits for the dawn of day through the long weary hours of the night. One by one he counts the loud ticking of the clock as on tip-tee he looks out into the darkness hoping to see one sign of the breaking of day. Thus the Jews had watched for the coming of their Messiah through the ages of captivity, persecution and humiliation which to them must have seemed long and dreary and dark. No sign appeared. No prophet appeared. Isaiah, Ezekiel, Amos, Hosea, had preached to deaf ears and unrolled visions before those who were as if blind; then four hundred years passed with no prophet in Israel; no longer was open warning or sign from God. They might look back into their history with rejoicing when thinking of how God had led them through the waters of the Red Sea and the vale of Jordan and how He had graciously fed them but to look ahead brought but darkness appeared.

Watching for the Dawn. — Trouble causes men to seek help; faith was kindled. Self-sufficiency in a great host of Jews gave way to a reliance upon the promise of a Great Redeemer who should come. Self-protection was seen to be in vain and hope was revived in One who would destroy their enemies, avenge their wrongs and restore and even to supplant the down-trodden Jews of Israel. So long had they watched that they knew every sign and soon came to believe that the hour was at hand. Lead by this belief the Jews were returning to Jerusalem, an old city presented the appearance of the great home coming. There were some righteous ones who believed they would not die until their eyes had seen His coming. Everywhere was an air of expectancy. It was as if any morning they might awake to see His banner planted on the hills around about Jerusalem. At any hour they believed they might hear the trumpet of the Redeemer sound to call the faithful to unsheathe their swords.

The Forerunner. — In ancient times it was a great thing to be a king's store and even to supplant the down-trodden Jews of Israel. So long had they watched that they knew every sign and soon came to believe that the hour was at hand. Lead by this belief the Jews were returning to Jerusalem, an old city presented the appearance of the great home coming. There were some righteous ones who believed they would not die until their eyes had seen His coming. Everywhere was an air of expectancy. It was as if any morning they might awake to see His banner planted on the hills around about Jerusalem. At any hour they believed they might hear the trumpet of the Redeemer sound to call the faithful to unsheathe their swords.

The Forerunner. — In ancient times it was a great thing to be a king's forerunner. The office was held by a young man, perfect in physical development and so fleet of foot that some even believed that his feet were winged. When the king entered his chariot the forerunner would run in front of the chariot waving an emblem of authority and calling upon the people to make way for the royal passage. Isaiah had foretold that prophet should appear, as a spiritual forerunner to proclaim and prepare for the coming of Israel's Messiah. It was now four hundred years since Malachi had declared he should be no less a personage than the translated prophet Elijah. With eagerness the pious Jews awaited the appearance of this forerunner who should proclaim the coming of their King.

A Devout Home. — Among the Watchers there could have been none more fervent than the godly couple in the quiet hillside home outside Jerusalem. It is said that to have been well born is to have overcome all the greater difficulties of life. For generations back the ancestors on both sides were priest unto God. But a good generation was not all they had. (1:6) They too were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless. All children should have this sort of parentage.

The Morning Sacrifice. — Early at dawn each morning the priest on the highest pinnacle of the temple watched for the first sign of dawn to give the signal for beginning the religious services. After the casting of lots the one of the great number of priests were chosen to offer incense in the holy place.

Ah Auspicious Moment. — Only once in a life-time might any son of Aaron hope to enjoy that privilege.

The Priest and the Angel. — Zacharias stood alone with the holy place. The incense had been spread upon the altar, on which the red coals glowed. Outside the worshippers silently watched while the prayers of Israel ascended to Heaven in the cloud of odors that rose from the golden altar. The priest was ready to reverently withdraw when suddenly a wondrous sight met his eyes. Between the altar and the golden candlestick stood the angel Gabriel. Never before had such a vision appeared to an ordinary priest so he was troubled. How sweet the words of the mighty Gabriel, "Fear not, for thy prayer is heard." Have you ever heard words like these to your soul? If not there is something good for you yet to receive from our God. Zacharias and Elizabeth were to have a son, and his name was to be John, and not only his parents but many were to rejoice at his coming.

There are two ways to be great. One of these is to be great in the eyes of men. Such men may be very wicked. Napoleon was. But John was to be great in the sight of God.

RESISTANT LEAF STRAINS REDUCE ROOT ROT DAMAGE.

Lexington, Ky. — Root rot of tobacco which causes Kentucky growers heavy losses each year, can be checked by the use of disease-resistant strains of leaf, according to results obtained during the summer just past by 46 Fayette county farmers who cooperated with County Agent W. R. Gabbert and the extension division of the College of Agriculture in growing resistant strains of burley by the side of common varieties on their farms. Results obtained by the Fayette county farmers are in line with those being obtained by more than 250 other farmers scattered over the burley and dark tobacco sections of the state who also conducted similar demonstrations. More than 80 per cent. of the 46 Fayette county demonstrators have shown their confidence in the resistant varieties by saving seed from them for next year's plantings.

In many of the Fayette demonstrations, the resistant varieties not only made more rapid growth than the common varieties but also were more uniform. In each of the demonstrations, the resistant and common varieties were grown side by side on the same field and given the same treatment.

In 20 out of the 46 cases, plants from the resistant strains averaged from four to 12 inches taller than those from common varieties while the common variety made the fastest growth in two cases. There was no noticeable difference in the rate of growth in 24 of the demonstrations. Plants from the resistant varieties showed more uniformity than those from the common varieties in 18 of the demonstrations while the variety commonly grown showed most uniformity in two cases. Twenty-six of the demonstrations failed to reveal any difference in the uniformity of the two types. However, it was found that where no difference could be noted in the rate of growth and uniformity of the two types that the demonstrations were conducted on either new blue grass sod or ground that had been in grass, clover or timothy for several years. In each of these cases observations indicated that the soil was not infested with root rot. This finding was in line with the fact that root rot is most apt to be present in soils where tobacco has been grown for two or more years in succession.

STEADFAST CONFIDENCE
The Following Statement Should
Form Conclusive Proof of Merit
To Every Maysville Reader.

Could stronger proof of the merit of my remedy be desired than the statements of grateful endorser who say their confidence has been undiminished by lapse of time? These are the kind of statements that are appearing constantly in your local papers, for "Donna's Kidney Pills." They are twice told and confirmed, with new enthusiasm. Can any reader doubt the following? It is from a Maysville resident: "Mrs. M. Holliday, 221 East Second Street, says: 'My back became weak and line and ached across my kidneys. My kidneys acted irregularly and I was dizzy and had headaches. I used Donna's Kidney Pills bought at Woodson's Drug Store and they relieved me of the attack.' (Statement given November 10th, 1916.)"

On November 22, 1920, Mrs. Holliday added: "My kidneys have given me no trouble at all since using Donna's Kidney Pills. I gladly renew my former statement." Price 60 cents, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Donna's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Holliday had. Foster-McIlburn Co., Mrs. Buffalo, N. Y.

Wide Canvass of Women Purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.
50,000 Women Answer

For some time a circular has been enclosed with each bottle of our medicine bearing this question: "Have you received benefit from taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound?"

Replies, to date, have been received from over 50,000 women answering that question.

98 per cent of which say YES. That means that 98 out of every 100 women who take the medicine for the ailments for which it is recommended are benefited by it.

This is a most remarkable record of efficiency. We doubt if any other medicine in the world equals it.

Think of it—only two women out of 100 received no benefit—98 successes out of a possible 100.

Did you ever hear of anything like it? We must admit that we, ourselves, are astonished.

Such evidence should induce every woman suffering from any ailment peculiar to her sex to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and see if she can't be one of the 98

THE LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO., Lynn, Mass.

Of course we know that our medicine does benefit the large majority of women who take it. But that only two out of 100 received no benefit is most astonishing.

It only goes to prove, however, that a medicine specialized for certain definite ailments—not a cure all—one that is made by the most scientific process; not from drugs, but from a combination of nature's roots and herbs, can and does do more good than hastily prepared prescriptions.

You see, we have been making, improving and refining this medicine for over 50 years until it is so perfect and so well adapted to women's needs that it actually has the virtue to benefit 98 out of every 100 women who take it.

Its reliability and recognized efficiency has gained for it a sale in almost every country in the world—leading all others.

Washington, Sept. 28. — President Harding has a hunch that the New York Yankees will win the world series this year, according to Dave Bancroft, captain and shortstop of the New York Giants, the National League pennant winner.

Bancroft called today at the White House and urged the President to attend one of the world series games. Mr. Harding indicated he would be unable to do so, and added, Bancroft said, that he was confident the Yankees would clinch the American League flag and trounce the Giants in the inter-league series.

New York Letter

New York. — The old mansion at the northwest corner of Lafayette and Prince streets, where James Monroe, fifth President of the United States, spent his last years, has been saved, at last. It has been going to ruin for years through lack of care and attention, and lovers of American history have feared that it would some day be long be demolished. Commissioner Enright has announced that a purchaser has been found for the place and that it will be restored to its original condition. It will cost $10,000 to restore the interior.

Two days after the announcement that Commander Evangeline Booth, head of the Salvation Army in the United States, had been removed from that position by General Bramwell Booth, of London, the New York postal clerks thought an unsensational Christmas impulse had hit the country. Literally thousands of letters came in protesting against this country's losing its beloved Army head. The latest protestor is William H. Anderson, head of Anti-Saloon League, who included in his plea made yesterday for her remaining here, a strong recommendation of her stand on the wet and dry question at the beginning of the last Salvation Army campaign. That came just when the opposition to the Eighteenth Amendment was being organized, and Miss Booth took a firm stand in the matter of eliminating James Speyer, banker, as chairman of the Salvation Army Campaign Committee, because he had announced himself as a "wet." Mr. Anderson indicated in his letter, an interest on the part of the whole "dry" forces in the country in the retention of Miss Booth as the head of the Army Work in this country.

It's all very well to live to be one hundred or so in a home for aged people or tucked away in a relative's household. But to be an active business woman at 92 is cause for real pride. Down in Livingston street, Anna — who last name sounded to me like "Murrerer", but couldn't have been — conducts a drygoods business from a pushcart. She is approaching her 93rd birthday and she waits on customers ten good hours a day and seems to enjoy it. Even in rainy weather, there she is, protecting her goods with a rubber blanket, but not minding the rain herself. That's what I call really "living" to be old.

Florence Reed is never allowed to get away from emotional roles. It's just as well, too, because not many of our actresses of today, enact them more tragically. In "East of Suez", a play by Somerset Maugham, just opened at the Eltinge, Miss Reed plays the part of a gorgeous Eurasian, who wrecks one or two white men, before she finds herself in the soft insidious shackles of the Orient, and finally absconds with a Chinaman. The endless problem of the Occident and Orient in social conflict is not new to the stage, but Mr. Maugham has made it particularly impressive.

It is now said that the greatest volume of traffic in New York meets at the junction of the Grand Concourse, Vanderbilt and Park avenues. If there is one change in New York for the person who has been absent for some time it is this section. As you walk up a block or so on Park avenue and "back" you can see a bit of the future New York. Sky-scrapers, constructed on the new zoning theory with their receding upper stories, rear up as a nest of toppers giving a new look for business. An office building is under construction as far north as Forty-sixth street on Park avenue. Just next door to the beautiful business structures are the palatial co-operative apartment houses, the last

For blocks you walk up the street under the shade and protection of their obliging porticoe awnings, which flapping in the wind and lighted by the inside magnificence reminds one of the choice boulevard section in Paris or Berlin, yet grander than any. The famous restaurants have moved up there, and the names of Sherry, Pierre, Marguery, and the like, bid you enter to satisfy the inner man. At meal time this section is the fashionable promenade — the photographers have deserted "the avenue."

MEDICAL RELIEF
CAMPAIGN CONDUCTED IN THE CRIMEA
American Relief Administration in Russia Helping Many Suffering.

Moscow, Russia, (By Mail) — A vigorous relief campaign is being conducted in the Crimea, where, according to Dr. Henry Beeuwkes, director of medical activities for the American Relief Administration in Russia, "conditions are probably worse than in any other part of Russia at the present time." The intensive disease prevention steps are in addition to the child and adult feeding program being carried on by the A. R. A.

The incidence of various infectious diseases is high and cholera is epidemic, says Dr. Beeuwkes.
"We are making allocations of supplies in this area much larger than population alone would justify and are taking all possible steps to push vigorously our inoculation campaign," reports the medical chief.

It is pointed out that the inhabitants of the Crimea have lost morals living under adverse conditions and have "been unable to maintain decent standards of cleanliness."

Thousands died in the past six months in the Crimea, the report shows, and the A. R. A. is now feeding fifty thousand children and 100,000 adults and arrangements are under way to feed 4,000 sick in hospitals.

"Due to scarcity of clothing, fuel and soap, the incidence of louse infection is high though considerably reduced during July and is now estimated at 30 per cent," says Dr. Beeuwkes. Other observations on conditions in the Crimea were: "The accommodations for children in homes is sufficient only for one-third the number of waifs and the remainder are on the streets. . . . Cholera is more or less epidemic and certain steps are being taken to control it, including inoculation of the inhabitants, approximately ten per cent. having been protected; cleaning of markets, streets, homes, and isolation as far as possible of the sick. Regulations regarding the latter are not strictly enforced as hospital facilities are not sufficient to isolate all cholera cases and some patients avoid hospitalization even when facilities exist, remaining at home a menace to their neighbors."

WILLIAM RUSSELL IN A POWERFUL DRAMA.

Seldom has a motion picture presented on the local screen possessed greater power than is possessed by the Fox photoplay "Strength of the Pines", in which William Russell appears at the Pastime Theater Tuesday. The plot is one of exceptional interest, the situations are finely constructed, the big climax is exceedingly original in conception and startling in execution, and the company is composed of singularly capable artists throughout—with the fascinating Irene Rich as Russell's chief support.

The scenes are laid in the heart of the Oregon forests. The story is based upon a timberland gang's war of extermination for self-enrichment. Its development centers upon a young man's desperate venture in penetrating the forest in behalf of a charming girl. And its climax depends upon the recovery of a property transfer deed executed twenty years before in order to circumvent the scoundrelly land pirates—who later robbed the girl of all her murdered father left to her.

It is a picture no one should miss.

Jasper, Minn. — "I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took it because I was having such pains in my stomach and through my back that I could not do my work. I had tried other medicines, but none did me the good that your Vegetable Compound did. Now I am able to do all my work alone while before I had my daughter staying at home to do it. I have told a number of friends what it has done for me and give you permission to use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. JESSE PETERSEN, Route 1, Jasper, Minn.

There is no better reason for your trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound than this—it has helped other women. So if you suffer from displacements, irregularities, backache, nervousness or are passing through the Change of Life remember this splendid medicine. What it did for Mrs. Petersen it may do for you.
